

Price list for 40GPoE switches for data center interconnection

AI Overview

40G dedicated switches for data center interconnection typically range from $3,000 to $25,000 per unit depending on vendor, port count, and features. Overview of 40G Switch Options 40G switches are designed for high-speed, low-latency data center environments, supporting aggregation, spine-leaf architectures, and high-density deployments. They are available in several configurations: Fixed Configuration Switches: Compact units with built-in 40G ports, suitable for smaller deployments or edge networking. Modular Chassis Switches: Scalable switches with modular slots for flexible port expansion, ideal for large data centers. Data Center Switches: High-density switches with deep buffers and advanced features for cloud and enterprise networks. Spine and Leaf Switches: Optimized for scalable leaf-spine architectures, providing high throughput and redundancy. Pricing Estimates Cisco 40G Switches: Prices vary widely based on model and configuration. Entry-level 40G switches start around $3,000-$5,000, while high-end modular or spine switches can exceed $20,000-$25,000 per unit. FS.com and QSFPTEK: Offer competitive pricing for 40G switches, particularly for bulk or enterprise purchases, though exact prices are typically provided upon request or via sales consultation. PHXFIBER Wholesale Options: Provide cost-effective 40G interconnect solutions, including QSFP+ breakout cables and switches, which can reduce overall deployment costs for multi-tiered networks. Additional Considerations Port Density: Higher port counts increase cost but improve scalability. Latency and Throughput: Low-latency switches are critical for real-time applications like financial trading or HPC. Energy Efficiency: Some models include power-saving features to reduce operational costs. Vendor Support and Warranty: Enterprise-grade switches often include extended support and software updates, w...
