

US Industrial Switch Supplier

AI Overview

Top US industrial switch suppliers include OTTO Engineering, Electro-Mech Components, RS, and Volta, offering a wide range of electromechanical, pushbutton, and motor control switches for industrial applications. Leading Suppliers OTTO Engineering Inc. (Carpentersville, Illinois) manufactures a full line of industrial control switches, including electromechanical switches, capacitor switches, and joysticks. Their products are used in factory equipment, excavation machinery, and material handling systems, serving OEMs with design, build, and debugging services for industrial applications. Electro-Mech Components, Inc. (EMC) (South El Monte, California) specializes in illuminated pushbutton switches, miniature switches, and multi-station switch assemblies. EMC products are widely used in aircraft, simulation, and transportation industries, and they offer custom solutions for specialized industrial needs. RS (RS Components) is an authorized distributor of switches from leading brands such as Honeywell, Carling Technologies, IDEC, Omron, and Schneider Electric. They provide pushbutton, limit, tactile, rocker, proximity, and toggle switches suitable for industrial control panels and material handling applications, with same-day shipping available. Volta offers industrial electrical equipment including UL1558 metal-enclosed switchgear, UL891 low voltage switchboards, and UL845 motor control centers (MCC). They provide both low and medium voltage switchgear, customizable with preferred breakers and relays, and integrate MCC and variable frequency drives for complete industrial systems. Additional Resources ThomasNet provides a comprehensive directory of US switch manufacturers and suppliers, including options for veteran-owned, women-owned, or minority-owned businesses. They list suppliers offering AC/DC pushbutton switches, electromechanical switches, motor starting switches, and specialized switches for industries such as telecommunications, aviation, military, and food processing.
