

Which companies manufacture relay protection devices

AI Overview

Leading manufacturers of relay protection devices include ABB, Siemens, Schneider Electric, GE, SEL, Omron, and Rockwell Automation, among others, offering a mix of industrial, utility, and digital protection solutions.

Global Leaders in Protective Relays

- ABB – A Swiss-based multinational, ABB is a dominant player in protective relays, offering a wide range of digital and electromechanical relays for industrial and utility applications. Their relays are known for reliability, multifunctionality, and compliance with international standards, making them widely used in substations and power networks.
- Siemens – Headquartered in Germany, Siemens produces relays under the SIPROTEC and SIRIUS series, integrating protection, control, and automation. Their products are widely adopted in industrial systems and critical infrastructure for motor protection and system stability.
- Schneider Electric – Based in France, Schneider Electric provides relays for control, protection, and automation, including the Easergy and TeSys ranges. Their relays are recognized for easy integration and reliability in industrial and building automation.
- General Electric (GE) – GE Grid Solutions, part of the US-based GE, specializes in transmission-level protection and ultra-high-voltage (UHV) applications. Their relays are widely used in long-haul renewable energy transport and large-scale power systems.
- Rockwell Automation – A US company focusing on industrial-grade relays, Rockwell integrates protective logic into industrial IoT systems, offering predictive maintenance and motor protection solutions compatible with Allen-Bradley ecosystems.
- SEL (Schweitzer Engineering Laboratories) – SEL is a US-based specialist in digital protective relays, known for advanced monitoring, fault detection, and cybersecurity features. They are recognized for innovation in smart grid and distributed energy re...
